NICE TO MEET YOU
By JESSIE J

‘Nice to meet you’ is Jessie's official autobiography and it's BRILLIANT! She talks about the things that are important to her and how she knows her fame won't last her forever. I borrowed it from the library and hardly put it down! It is about everything that you would want to know about Jessie J and more.

It begins in her early life and ends in the present day. It follows her day to day life and the trials that she faced to be the mega star she is now.
You can get this book from the library (when I return it).

Stars - 5/5

This book is the epic sequel to Anna Dressed in Blood. Cass, distraught about Anna sacrificing herself to save all his friends, travels to London to find her. I love this book because it is full of mystery and surprises; this book is a very good page turner, which you can’t put down. I would recommend this book for horror and mystery lovers.

Pegasus and the Flame
By Kate O’ Hearn

In the story, ‘Pegasus and the Flame’, a girl loves to read about the books of Pegasus, and she obviously knows that he is not real. But is he?

A boy that lives down her street called Joel loves Pegasus more than anything in the world, even more than she does. Joel was a bully at their school. He didn’t let anyone mess him around, especially about Pegasus. This is a sad but adventurous tale throughout, with chapters and chapters of detailed writing bursting from this book.

Ataturk
By Andrew Mango.

‘Ataturk’ means Father of the Turks. His picture is everywhere you go in Turkey. Before Mustafa Kemal, Turkey didn’t exist as a unified country. What we now recognise as Turkey belonged to other countries and their empires. This definitive biography charts the life of Ataturk from his early life to army officer to revolutionary statesman who founded the Republic of Turkey in 1923. He was a moderniser and reformer- moving Turkey away from its Ottoman past towards the West. For example he replaced Arabic with the Latin script to form the Turkish language and created a secular constitution. These included full political rights to women- in the 1935 election, 18 women were elected MPs. This is a carefully researched biography of a fascinating and revered man that goes beyond his public image you experience in Turkey.

David believes that once a writer accepts money of praise for his books he is actually selling his soul—in David's case he sold his soul to the devil. In a spinning and elaborate tale, using a sarcastic and macabre style, David is manipulated and pulled into events beyond his control, committing crimes and being chased by the crooked police, criminals and his own conscience while losing everything he loves. This is a cracking Faustian tale.

The characters in the book are interesting, well drawn and sometimes just plain scary. The pace is a bit slow but purposeful. The book is very enjoyable; especially Zafón's cynicism, his story telling and prose.

If you enjoy horror/gothic/spooky genre books then this is for you!
