

In Alana Spencer's most recent interview with The Holgate Academy, she revealed some details about the team behind the cameras of 'The Apprentice'.

We were lucky enough to email Alana Spencer, winner of series 12 of The Apprentice. We asked her how Lord Sugar acted on The Apprentice when the cameras weren't rolling. "Lord Sugar is exactly the same as you see him on TV," she said. On TV we see that he's very stern and can take his roles very seriously as well as having a nice and playful personality.

She then shared the question everyone wanted to know, how difficult was the team to work with? She's very supportive and cooperative. She helps people when she can, she also strives to make everyone happy. "I was lucky to have a really lovely team. Anytime we didn't agree, we would try to find a way everyone was happy with."

We wanted to know who Alana looked up to the most, who she aspired to be. "My uncle. He started his business when he was 17 like me, he's worked really hard, and is now doing incredibly well for himself!" This shows that Alana aspires to be a business person like him and make her uncle proud (which I'm sure she has!).

We really appreciate Alana's answers and are really grateful that she participated in the interview.
